EDUCATED FARMERS.

A correspondent who has but little faith in agricultural colleges, and apparently little knowledge of what a farmer ought to know, inquires of us, "what is there about farming that is necessary for a boy to go to school to learn ?"

In answer to this, we do not propose to go into the detail of the boundless field of knowledge which it is important the true farmer should study and master. But as stock breeding and rearing are a necessary part of a farmer's business, he should understand the laws of life, both vegetable and animal. The intelligent feeder should have a scientific knowledge the structure and functions of time may prove fatal.

animals he grows. Reasoning from cause to effect, as the animals have no power of transforming one select the spot for each bud in element of food into another, he smooth part of the branch, not should know the exact nature of too large, say from one to two the food he intends for a particular purpose, which can alone be obtained by a scientific knowledge of its elements, and thus know just what is required to build up the frame, the muscles, or produce fat. bud may then be pressed into The farmer should know what kind | place, cutting off square the porof food contains the necessary tion that goes above the cross incaloric to keep up the animal heat in low temperatures, and what food contains the most starchy elements to produce certain results.

Nor is a knowledge of the structure and wants of the animal all that is necessary. Vegetable life must be understood, and he must know just what kind of food each particular plant requires for its health and development. And thus, if our correspondent will dip deep into the duties and business of a true farmer, he will find that intelligent agriculture should be conducted with science, art and skill. All other branches of industry have limited fields of research. Agriculture is boundless. Farmers have groped in the dark long enough, the business has been degraded for the reason that the 1gnorant and unlearned have plodded on, doing things at random, as frequently wrong as right. When our correspondent, as well as the rest of the world, learns that the advanced farmer and the farm are governed by definite scientific principles and rules as fixed as those of mathematics, mechanics or engineering, then, and then only, will the intelligent farmer's son respect the calling of his father. Then will the farmer take his true place in society of the refined and learned. Then no longer will farming be a game of chance, or the farmer's features proclaim him a drudge.-Iowa Register.

BEER.

The Commissioner of Agriculture, in his report for the year 1875, speaks as follows: "There can be no doubt of the general adulteration of all malt liquors. In England and other countries, where heavy panalties are imposed, and an increasing vigilance practiced to detect and punish such frauds, of shell corn, or an average of one by a system of inspection of all mult liquors hundred and five bushels to the manufactured before exposed to sale, the practice is very common. How much more acre. The field was allowed to n this country, where there are no laws on the surject, and no officer to carefully analyze the products of the brewery? Some lay in clover for one year without years ago, Professor Mapes, of New York, analyzed the Leer from a dozen different breweries, and all were found adulterated with poxious substances. It is said that the sale of drugs to brewers is a profitable part of the trade. This is perfectly infamous. Cocculus ind aus, (fish-berry,) nux vomica, (dog-button, from which strychaine is obharrowed twice, and the corn put tained,) are some of the delectable substances in with a planter on the 2d and 3d found in beer! These are potent poisons, and the brewer found using them should be of May. After the crop was up drowned at once in o do of his own vats. the cultivator was again called The British Parliament passed a law to prevent this nefarious business. The following into use, and afterwards, at the is an extract: 'No druggist, vender of or proper intervals during the season, dealer in drugs, or chemist, or any other person, shall sell or deliver to any licensed the plows were run through it brewer, dealer in or retailer of beer, knowing three times, and the corn harvestthem to be such, or shall seil or deliver to ed measured 2,730 bushels of shellany person on account of, or in trust for, any such brewer, dealer or retailer, any liquor ed corn. So much for green manlled by the name of or sold for coloring, from whatever material the same may be made; or any material or preparation other than unground brown malt, for the darkening the color of worts beer, or any molasses, vitriol, honey, quassia, coccolus indicus, grains of paradise, Guinea pepper, or opium, or any extract or preparation of molasses, or any article or preparation to be used in worts beer for or as a substitute for malt or hops; and if any druggist shall offend in any of these particulars, such preparation, &c., shall be forfeited, and may be seized by any officer of excise, and the person so offending shall forfelt five hundred pounds.' "Under this law, very many druggists and brewers were brought to grief, and yet the practice continues. Unless the American public are ready to admit the immaculate purity and innocence of American brewers, they must be content, while drinking their beer, to cherish the belief that they are at the same time guzzling some narcotic poison or damaging medicine. In view of the unprecedented growth of the barley crop; of the great increase of the number of malsters and brewers; of the vast unknown quantities of beer that are drunk in every city and almost every town on the continent, it is the dictate of sound wisdom that the attention of legislators should be called to the subject of the adulteration of our malt liquors, and severe penalties should be inflicted as a preventive.'
